I don't understand why the city of Dana Point is automatically caving in to a threatened lawsuit. Have we not given due process or equality to all people who have run for office in previous elections. That a minority has been overlooked or persecuted never crossed my mind.

I can't remember more than a couple of majority people running for office here. Caucasians are a minority in CA correct? I'm not sure to what end, this suit is really about. To elect more people of Mexican heritage? What is the race equation in Dana Point? I'm not counting illegals because they cannot vote. So, are they counted in this study? Perhaps our city attorney needs to confer with similar cities on how they approached this controlling tactic. Or his contract should be cut short and replaced by someone who would actually fight for the city of Dana Point. Capo Beach, and Moncarch Beach. This threatened lawsuit is more divisive than uniting us as one city. There are already too many examples of how the three are treated differently.
